It's with pleasure and a sense of fulfilment that I write to congratulate everyone on the successful released our current issue of Universal Journal of Pharmaceutical Research. More than ever before, there has been a time when the world is dire need of science to combat every day health uncertainties. This is why our contributions and contributions from published authors in this issue are highly appreciated. Given the high quality of our journal, I am glad to announce that my acquaintance have promised to publish with us on our next issue. It would be very imperative if we take this success stories to our schools and labs to encourage more contributions from colleagues. It is a great sense of fulfilment that we have provided the medium for scientists in medical and pharmaceutical research fields to share their findings and knowledge with the world, to find the lasting remedy to our every day global health challenges. Despite the fact that we have achieved so much, there is still room to do more in order to stay up to speed with the dynamic challenges we face. In a fast changing world, continuum and improvement in critical aspects of life, is true sustainability. We appreciate all those that have worked tirelessly behind the scenes to review and approve contributions from all authors and certify them for publication. As we pray and hope for a more safe, progressive, peaceful and sustainable world. Let's remember that we can do our bits within our neighbourhood to help the world achieve its global goals.

Thanks, with regards
